The possibility to designate a beneficiary is a key advantage of our segregated funds. It is important to designate a beneficiary so that in the event of the annuitant's death, a benefit is payable to the designated person. It is possible to designate more than one beneficiary, and if several beneficiaries are designated in the contract, it will be divided accordingly.

Unique advantages

Guarantees

Capital protection guarantees of the segregated funds provide a guarantee of 75% upon maturity and 75% upon death, at no additional charge. It is possible to increase these guarantees to 100% of the capital upon maturity and 100% of the capital upon death.

Resets

It is possible to choose a segregated fund guarantee that provides automatic resets of the guarantee upon death. Every three years, upon the anniversary of the contract, automatic resets allow for the potential to lock in market gains, which can potentially increase the capital intended for the beneficiaries. Resets of the guarantee upon maturity are possible upon request for certain segregated fund guarantees.

Exemption from seizure

In the event of bankruptcy or recourse by creditors, the law may protect a segregated fund policy when the beneficiaries designated in the contract meet the established criteria. This protection is especially attractive for professionals and business owners.

Confidentiality

In the event of the annuitant's death, the amounts payable under the segregated funds are paid directly to the beneficiaries designated in the contract. This also avoids public proceedings, such as probate, where the contents of a will may be made public. The confidentiality of the decisions is therefore maintained.

Speed

By not having to deal with the estate, the settlement is most often simpler and less expensive.

Avoid probate

In all provinces (except Quebec), the estate must be probated, a process that can be very expensive. When an annuitant dies, the amounts payable under the segregated funds are paid directly to the beneficiaries, and as such probate formalities and fees can be avoided. A larger part of the estate goes directly to the designated beneficiaries.

Protection

SSQ Insurance is a member of Assuris, a consumer protection program that provides investors with a level of protection against the loss of benefits due to bankruptcy of the member company.
